STERNAMAN'S FIELD GOAL BEATS GREEN BAY PACKERS GAME RECAP (GREEN BAY PRESS-GAZETTE)

(CHICAGO) - Dying with their boots on, the Green Bay Packers went down to defeat by the score of 3 to 0 at the hands of the Chicago Bears Sunday afternoon in a bitterly contested gridiron argument at Cubs park before some 6,000 football fans of whom there were about 500 from Green Bay. A fumble by Hendrian of a punt in the third quarter paved the way for the only score of the game. Taking advantage of this break, the Bears rushed twice and then Little Joe Sternaman booted the ball between the uprights. It was a pretty good piece of kicking. The Packers never gave up the ship, however. They made as game a stand as has ever been seen on a football field in the last two minutes of play. Playing his last card Lambeau tried a forward pass from his own 15-yard line. This toss was intercepted by Halas of the Bruins. It was so dark one couldn't tell one player from the other. This Bruin dashed to the Bears 6-yard line for a first down.

WAS A GRUDGE BATTLE

But Green Bay never quit. Four times did the Chicago backs hurl themselves against the Bay forward wall but with scant yardage and when the whistle blew the ball was still two yards from the goal line. It was a fighting team all the way and the Green Bay fans in attendance were still mighty proud of their Packers. The Bays' aerial attack cut a big figure in the game. Time after time, the long passes of the Packers even drew a hand from the Chicago followers. And some of the Windy City scribes in the press box admitted that when it came to "basketball football" the Packers were in a class by themselves. It was a grudge battle all the way and the players of both teams milled it all the time. There wasn't any love lost and the teams were out to win at any cost. Towards the close of the first half, Hanny paid Tillie Voss a verbal barrage and Voss came back. The result was that hostilities broke and both players were chased to the sidelines. This was a bad break for the Bays as it crimped the air drive as Voss was a great receiver.

BUCK GRABS FREE BALL

Several times in the forepart of the game the Packers were in the scoring zone. Once a forward pass went bad across the goal line and again Buck fizzled a field goal. The Packers had trouble launching a consistent attack but they were always dangerous. The Bays followed the ball closer than usual and covered a lot of fumbles. Once Cub Buck broke through and grabbed a free ball. He was headed for the goal line but Halas grabbed him from behind. It was just these sort of breaks that went against the Packers and made victory possible for the Bears. The Packers came out of the game in pretty good shape and they will be fit for the fray at Kansas City on Thanksgiving Day. The team leaves for Kansas City on Monday night

FORMER NOTRE DAME WINGMAN JOINS GREEN BAY TEAM

NOV 25 (Kansas City) - The Green Bay Packers arrived here this morning after a night ride over the Santa Fe railroad in a special Pullman from Chicago, where on Sunday they suffered a 3 to 0 defeat at the hands of the Bears in a pro league football game. The Packers are not in a very aggressive mood, and they are looking for revenge. The upset by the Bruins was an unpleasant dose of medicine and it is a good bet that when they step out on Muehlbach field here on Thanksgiving day to clash with Kansas City, the Big Bay Blues will be right on edge for a battle royal...PLENTY OF INTEREST: There appears to be quite a bit of interest here over the game. Manager Andrews of the Kansas City club has advertised the Bays to the skies, the Packers are billed here as one of the greatest professional football teams in the country. The newspapers are giving Lewellen quite a play along with Tillie Voss, Lambeau, Buck and the other stars of the Big Bay Blues. The Packers were worked out in Muehlbach field this afternoon and another drill is scheduled for Wednesday. The Kansas City Athletic Club has opened its doors to the Bays and everything is being done to make the stay here a pleasant one. The squad is stopping at the Dixon, one of the leading hotels in Kansas City. Although the defeat by the Bears sort of skidded the Packers' national championship hopes, there is still a fighting chance for a playoff in the title series and the Bays are determined to come through with victories over Kansas City and Racine, whom they play on Sunday...FOUR HORSEMEN VISIT: Jimmy Crowley and the other famous Four Horsemen from Notre Dame visited with the Packers before they went back to South Bend on Monday. These players all sang the praises of Zip Vergara, star Notre Dame end and lineman of 1923, who has come to terms with the Packer management and will probably be seen in action on Sunday with the Big Bay Blues against Racine. Aside from Jabber Murray's stiff neck and a few other minor bruises, the team came out of the Bears combat in good shape. Tillie Voss'; mitts are none the worse for the tilt with Battling Hanny.

GREEN BAY BATTLES KANSAS CITY "PROS" ON THURSDAY

NOV 26 (Kansas City) - All signs point to a good turnout of football fans here on Thanksgiving afternoon when the Packers battle Kansas City in a pro league game at Muehlbach park. There will be room for all and then some as Muehlbach park is one of the biggest in the country. It has it over Cubs park in Chicago like a tent. Green Bayians are beginning to rally to the support of the Packers here. About a dozen former residents of the Bay have dropped in to say hello and reserve their tickets for Thursday's game. Among them were Wildred Moore, Fred Basche, Bud Arthur and Capeheart...KAWS LOAD UP: The Big Bay Blues are going to have a battle on their hands as the Kaws have been pointed for this game. Manager Andrews has "loaded up" for the engagement and it is said that a number of new faces will be seen in the battle front. Eddie Usher is still tending bar around here and he will play against the Bays along with Jack Milton, another ex-Packer. Lewellen, who had a two day absence leave reported Wednesday morning, brought along with him several of the Nebraska players who will be guests on the Packer bench. Among them was Weir, giant tackle. This husky Cornhusker may be a Packer after he finishes college...EXPECT TOUGH GAME: The Bays have had two practices here and the club should be at top speed tomorrow. The team is confident of climbing a notch in the percentage table at the expense of the Kaws but it is going to be a whole lot tougher game than the folks at home think. The Packers will start their regular lineup with Lewellen playing left halfback. The team is in great shape.

PACKERS STAGE PARADE IN KANSAS CITY; ALL PRIMED FOR THANKSGIVING BATTLE

NOV 27 (Kansas City) - The advance guard of Green Bay rooters blew in here Wednesday night. Perkins, who hasn't missed a Packer game in eight years, arrived at the Dixon hotel, accompanied by Bunion and Jorgenson. They had been on the road since Sunday. About a hundred reservations have been sold in the Green Bay section. The Packer squad participated in a street parade on Wednesday afternoon to help boost the game. Headed by a band, the players on both teams traveled through the streets in an automobile procession. A calliope wound up on the tail end. The cars carried big signs saying: "See the Packers on Thursday at Muehlbach park, one of the world's best football teams."...LOOK AT THE ELEPHANT: The cars carrying the Big Bay Blues were decorated in the team's colors and the Packer blankets were draped over the hoods. It is estimated that 10,000 persons watched the pigskin march. It sure was a peach of an advertising stunt. The players had a lot of fun out of it until some of the onlookers began likening the affair to a circus parade and one urchin drew a laugh when he pointed a finger at Cub Buck, saying, "Oh, look at the elephant." Woodin didn't like the parade because no Fords were available...EARLY TO BED: The gang was all to bed early Wednesday night and there was plenty of pep on tap Thursday morning. Every member of the team is fit for the fray and they are confident of getting back on victory row. Thursday night the Packers will gather around the festive board and enjoy a Thanksgiving feed. A varied program has been arranged for with each member of the squad doing his bit.

PLAY BY PLAY ON GREEN BAY-RACINE CONTEST ON SUNDAY

NOV 27 (Green Bay Press-Gazette) - The famous Playograph will again carry Green Bay football fans to the sidelines of a Packer gridiron contest on Sunday afternoon. This time to the game with Racine Legion at Racine. The board will record every move of the Packer eleven as it is made upon the field at the southern Wisconsin city. Kickoff will be marked up at 2:00 o'clock but the wire will open at 1:30 in plenty of time to get the preliminary dope as to the general conditions before the game. A small admission fee will be charged.

THE PLAYOGRAPH

NOV 27 (Green Bay Press-Gazette) - Next Sunday will probably be the last time that The Press-Gazette will operate its football playograph this season. It is hoped that the public has received as much pleasure in the operation as both the football and baseball boards as has The Press-Gazette in offering this amusement to interested fans. The Press-Gazette has been complimented on this service many times and therein lies the only satisfaction in such an undertaking. All game were shown free with the exception of the Packers' out-of-town datings. These, too, would have been given without charge had not the Green Bay Football corporation been worthy and in need of every bit of financial support. The advertising value of the Packers to the city of Green Bay cannot be computed in dollars and cents. Professional football has broadcast the name of Green Bay as a live, sport-loving and progressive city. Such an enviable reputation could not be brought, but the means of gaining such a hold on the public mind has been and always should be supported financially. When the Packers' games were shown on the playograph The Press-Gazette operated the board bore the expense and turned the proceeds over to the football corporation.

Packers Stage Parade In Kansas City; All Primed For Thanksgiving Battle

Legendary rivalry - The Packers-Bears rivalry has had several memorable players and match-ups throughout its history

One of the least surprising facts in pro football history is that the first time players were ejected from an NFL game for fighting occurred in 1924 between the Bears and Packers. Chicago's Frank Hanny got into what was reported as a "heated verbal exchange" with Green Bay's Tillie Voss, which escalated to fisticuffs and both men got tossed. There is no record of the exact dialogue of the verbal exchange but the smart money says it must have had something to do with Voss's nickname. Certainly this couldn't have been the first time Voss, whose given name was Walter, took grief about the handle "Tillie" and you can only push a guy so far before he reaches the breaking point. Voss was not the last Packer to be thrown out of a game against the Bears. Charles Martin was asked to leave the premises after his infamous body slam of Jim McMahon about a calendar day after the play was over during a game in 1986. But Voss is a member of an exclusive club in the history of football's oldest rivalry. He is one of 83 players (according to Stats Inc.) who played for both teams. Some of the players who have suited up on both sides of the Wisconsin/Illinois state line were quite famous. McMahon is at the top of that list. His stints with the Bears, from 1982-88 and the Packers in 1995 and 1996 put him in an even more exclusive section of the club; he won Super Bowl rings with both teams, both times, interestingly enough, at the expense of the New England Patriots. There is a long list of quarterbacks who did duty in Green Bay and Chicago. McMahon's backup on the venerable '85 Bears was Mike Tomczak who eventually became a starter during the late stages of his Chicago tenure (1985-90) before spending the 1991 season in Green Bay. There is even a Heisman Trophy winner in the group; Danny Wuerffel, who won college football's most prestigious award as a Florida Gator in 1996. Like many Heisman winners, Wuerffel performed unremarkably at the next level, struggling with the Saints before spending forgettable seasons mired deeply on the bench with the Packers in 2000 and the Bears in 2001. Jack Concannon played quarterback on mediocre Chicago teams from 1967-71. He was arguably a major reason for the mediocrity. He landed in Green Bay for the 1974 season. Concannon is more famous for his roles in the movies *M*A*S*H*, where he quarterbacked the losing team and "Brian's Song," where he played himself, than for anything he did on a football field that wasn't make believe. Bobby Douglass, who ran first and passed later, succeeded Concannon in Chicago. Douglass was an erratic aerialist, whose tosses were wild and hard, but he rushed for 968 yards in a 14 game season in 1972, a quarterback record that stood for 34 years. He played for the Packers in 1972, which, as it turned out was not his only connection to the dairy state. His son Billy was a point guard on the Badgers basketball team in the early 1990's. Billy's mom is the former Carol O'Neal, who was a Playboy model. Bobby obviously fared much better at finding a wife than locating his receivers. The late Bob Jeter, a cornerback on the Packers championship team during his run in Green Bay (1963-70), finished his career in Chicago (1971-73) and also created a basketball connection to Wisconsin. His son Rob is the head men's basketball coach at UWM. Jeter, born in 1969, was too young to remember his Dad playing, but says his father's experience in Green Bay had an impact on the family. "You always hear about 'Lombardi Time,'" Rob Jeter said. "If we were scheduled to go somewhere, you'd better be ready at least a half hour before we were scheduled to leave." Bob Jeter wound up living in Chicago and working for the city, but he remained a Packer at heart. He was inducted into the Packer Hall of Fame in 1985. "He had fond memories of the Packers, didn't really speak of the Bears," Rob Jeter said. "He was traded to the Packers later in his career and had hoped to stay with the Bears as a coach and it never really materialized. I think because of that, it left a little bit of a sour taste in his mouth, so he never really talked about the Bears, but he was always up for every Packer event." At one of those events, a young Rob Jeter, who grew up in Chicago supporting the Bears, met Bart Starr. "I went up to him and introduced myself and we sat down for a half hour and we just talked. It was that experience that really grew on me. It's a no-brainer now. I'm a Packers fan." Some members of the club experienced greatness with one team, finishing in a lesser role when joining the other side. Running back Jim Grabowski (Packers 1966-70, Bears 1971) and defensive lineman Steve McMichael (Bears 1981-93, Packers 1994) are prime examples. As is Edgar Bennett, one of two current members of the Packers staff on the list. Bennett, Green Bay's running backs coach and Rob Davis, the team's director of player personnel each saw action on both sides of the rivalry. But some of the best stories in this group of 83 predate FOX Sports and even television. "Tiny" Engbretsen played for two Chicago teams, the Bears and the Cardinals before joining the Packers in 1934. He was the starting guard and an accomplished place-kicker and finished his playing career in Green Bay in 1941. "Tiny" got his nickname because of his massive size, 6'1", 240 lbs, slighter in stature than many of today's tailbacks but mammoth attributes at the time. "Tiny" apparently didn't earn much on the football field. He spent his off seasons prospecting for gold in the western U.S. He did more prospecting as a Packer scout after he retired. Ookie Miller played center, guard and linebacker for the Bears from 1932-36 and with the Packers in 1938. His real name was Charles but he got his nickname from his love of cookies. Ookie was another financially challenged combatant from yesteryear. He claimed Bears owner George Halas paid him 100 bucks a game but deducted the expenses of bandages and even doctor visits from his paycheck back in the days when very few players were "physically unable to perform," and being put on "injured reserve" meant a bus ticket home. Too bad Ookie isn't playing these days. He'd have made a bundle endorsing Oreos or Chips Ahoy. And finally, we circle back to Tillie Voss, who in addition to securing his place in NFL history with his ejection for fighting in the Packers battle with the Bears in 1924, was perhaps the most frequent traveler in the annals of professional sports. Tillie played for 11 football teams in 9 seasons. He spent 1924 with Green Bay, and suited up for Chicago in 1927-28. He played for two different teams during the 1921, 1922 and 1929 seasons. In '29, he took the field for both the Dayton Triangles and Buffalo Bisons which both went out of business after the season. And Tillie was on the move 12 months out of the year. He played professional basketball in the American Basketball League from 1925-30 including stints with the Brooklyn Arcadians and Washington Palace Five. I'm guessing Tillie was mostly a renter. He must have gotten killed on deposits. So who will add their names to the already legendary lore surrounding this rivalry this weekend? Will Bears defensive back "Peanut" Tillman get into a row with Packers wide receiver Greg Jennings after enduring merciless taunting about his nickname? With these teams, anything is possible. And somewhere in the great expanse of football heaven, Ookie, Tiny and Tillie will be looking down upon Soldier Field, smiling. (SOURCE: FoxSports.com)

The first players ejected from a Bears-Packers game—based on newspaper accounts—were Frank Hanny and Walter “Tillie” Voss. Hanny, the Bears’ left end, and Voss, the Packers’ right end, were tossed out of the third meeting between the teams on November 23, 1924, for fighting.

“Towards the close of the first half, Hanny paid Tilly (sic) Voss a verbal barrage and Voss came back. The result was that hostilities broke and both players were chased to the sidelines,” George Whitney Calhoun reported under his byline “Cal” in the next day’s Press-Gazette.

Hanny also was ejected from the 1926 game in Chicago for fighting with Dick O’Donnell of the Packers.

Fans here are gathered at Legion Park in Green Bay to watch the "Playograph" which relayed Packer plays during away games in 1924, before the advent of radio. Telegraph reports from the game's press box were used to re-create the game on a mechanical display board. (Source: Packerville Blog - https://packerville.blogspot.com/2008_09_01_archive.html)
